

●担当教員

Supervisor			Research focus
Position	Name	Address
Professor (President)	katsuya.kanda	k_kanda@kyotokango.ac.jp	The supervisor provides guidance in writing a doctoral dissertation to enable to solve nursing management problems based on evidence and logically develop considerations that contribute to people's health, and cultivate the ability to conduct research autonomously and contribute to the development of nursing science.
Professor (dean of graduate school)	toyoe.taguchi	t_taguchi@kyotokango.ac.jp	The supervisor instructs doctoral students to enhance their research outcomes in critical care and to develop the ability to conduct independent research activities that contribute to the advancement of critical care nursing through their doctoral dissertations.
Professor	mariko.ohara	m_ohara@kyotokango.ac.jp	The supervisor helps students refine the results of analysis of data obtained through fieldwork on disaster and international nursing and develop an evidence-based doctoral dissertation to cultivate the qualities and abilities required of nursing educators and researchers and guide them to contribute to nursing and society.
Professor	sumiko.tsuhako	s_tsuhako@kyotokango.ac.jp	The supervisor helps students refine research findings on issues in nursing education, the development of critical thinking, and Roy's theory of nursing and develop a dissertation creatively. Through this process, the supervisor provides education and guidance to cultivate the qualities and abilities required of educators and researchers who can disseminate their findings domestically and internationally.
Professor	asako.takei	a_takei@kyotokango.ac.jp	The supervisor provides guidance to help students refine research findings in psychiatric nursing and develop an original doctoral dissertation, and cultivates the ability to contribute to the development of nursing through the process of conducting independent research.
Professor	hirofumi.takagi	h_takagi@kyotokango.ac.jp	The supervisor provides education and guidance to help students properly interpret research findings in international health using statistical significance, refine these findings through literature-based analysis to develop a research dissertation that contributes scientific evidence, and independently prepare the materials required for dissertation review and publication as academic papers.
Professor	hiromichi.hatano	h_hatano@kyotokango.ac.jp	The supervisor cultivates the ability to contribute to the development of community health by guiding students through the process of refining research findings in community health and developing an academic and original doctoral dissertation.
Professor	atsuko.isobe	a_isobe@kyotokango.ac.jp	The supervisor cultivates researchers who contribute to improving the health of people across countries and regions by guiding students through the process of refining research findings in international nursing and health and developing a doctoral dissertation that is both academically original and creative.
Professor	kuko.miyabayashi	i_miyabayashi@kyotokango.ac.jp	The supervisor cultivates educators and researchers by guiding students through the process of refining findings from interim presentations on ethical issues in nursing education and clinical nursing management, as well as related derivative issues, and developing a doctoral dissertation.
Professor	miyuki.inoue	m_inoue@kyotokango.ac.jp	The supervisor cultivates independent educators and researchers by guiding students through the development of an academic and original doctoral dissertation on the topic of healthy living for elderly people.
Professor	hiroko.takizawa	h_takizawa@kyotokango.ac.jp	The supervisor instructs for doctoral students to improve the results of their research on community health promotion, and to enable them to conduct independent research activities that contribute to the development of community health through the doctoral dissertation process.
Associate Professor	shiho.kawata	s_kawata@kyotokango.ac.jp	The supervisor instructs for doctoral students to improve the results of their research on community health promotion, and to enable them to conduct independent research activities that contribute to the development of community health through the doctoral dissertation.

[Consultation with a supervisor before application]

Before applying, contact your prospective supervisor by email or other means to discuss your research and study plans after admission.
 (When contacting the supervisor, include nyushi@kyotokango.ac.jp in the cc field.)
 If you have any questions, contact the Admission Division by phone or email.
 TEL: 075-311-0123 Email: nyushi@kyotokango.ac.jp